INSPIRING SDG ACTION

JCI and the Global Goals for Sustainable Development

At the end of 2015, the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) reached their deadline. JCI members worked to advance this set of eight goals since their adoption in 2008. In anticipation of a new set of development goals, nearly 40,000 JCI members took part in the MY World Survey—a survey targeted at capturing people's voices, priorities and views to help define the post-2015 development agenda.

In September of 2015, more than 193 world leaders gathered at the United Nations to adopt the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). During the General Assembly at the 2015 JCI World Congress in Kanazawa, Japan, JCI's nearly 120 National Organizations signed the Kanazawa Declaration, committing the organization to advance the SDGs.

Also widely known as the Global Goals for Sustainable Development, these 17 goals are the building blocks to peace and will work together to end extreme poverty, fight inequality and injustice and combat climate change by 2035. Dedicated to developing a better world, JCI members and young people globally have begun to identify the goals most relevant to their communities, take action to engage stakeholders and implement projects that provide sustainable solutions to the greatest challenges of our time.

SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS

JCI Active Citizen Framework

A Better World Begins Here

REVIEW | Monitor and Evaluate Results

It is important to monitor progress throughout the project to determine if the goals and intended impact are on track to be achieved. Finally, analyze data to measure the resulting positive change.

ANALYZE

Examine Community Needs

To enable communities to achieve sustainable impact, the community's needs must be analyzed and understood first in order to identify their root causes.

EXECUTE

Take Action

Once the need and root cause have been identified, active citizens take action by mobilizing resources, rallying support and implementing the project plan. By combining resources, the community is enabled to achieve even greater sustainable impact.

DEVELOP | Formulate Sustainable Solutions

By uniting with stakeholders from all sectors of society, projects are formulated to address the community's core needs and their root causes. Collaborators outline a project plan including goals, actions and desired outcomes. Solutions target three integrated stages of community development that drive a community toward prosperity.

① Health and Wellness

② Education and Economic Empowerment

③ Peace, Prosperity, and Sustainability
